What is the University Staff Union (USQ)?

The USU is the face of professional/general staff unionism in Queensland universities, previously known as the Federation of General Staff Unions. Underpinned by the resources of three of the biggest unions in the state, the ASU, LHMU and QPSU, the USU aims to pool resources efficiently to empower members to achieve equity and due reward in their working lives.

The USU is more than a new identity – it is a new way of doing business.

University Staff Union (USQ) Bulletin No. 1571

2 November 2009

So Little in Santa's Sack

As we come into Christmas it's time to look at what the University of Southern Queensland has put into Santa's sack for the staff at USQ.

The staff have been good, they've worked hard all year, they've survived ROP... just.

But what a surprise they'll have when Santa pulls out his sack - 3% per year with a bonus (no mention of how much) from the end of year budget "surplus."

What? People got a bigger pay rise for counting coins at Armaguard.

No movement on paid Christmas Shut Down.

What? Other Universities' staff don't have to use their annual leave when they shut down over Christmas.

No increases in protections against contracting out our jobs in the Collective Agreement.

What? Why wouldn't the University....

The University of Southern Queensland looks like it is giving staff a lump of coal this Christmas.

Is this what you want?

Negotiations have been going on since February.

Tick the box below if you don't want a lump of coal for Christmas and fax this bulletin back to the ASU Office on 3252 1208 or email to info@qld.asu.net.au - ATTN John Kelly.

Yes, I want a real pay rise, I want paid Christmas Shut Down and I want my job protected.
